

MEMORANDUM FOR: Deputy Director for Administration
FROM: Executive Assistant to the DDCI

Harry:

Please handle as you see fit. Thanx,

DDA R66

Date 11 September 1985

COMPUTER COMMUNICATIONS SPECIALISTS, INC.

Atlanta / Peachtree Corners Business Park
6683 Jimmy Carter Boulevard / Norcross, Georgia 30071
Telephone 404 441-3114 / Telex 80-4292 SPEDEX, ATL.

September 4, 1985

Mr. John N. McMahon
Deputy Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C. 20505

RECEIVED
FBI
45-1

Executive Registry
85- 3463/1

85-3172/1

Dear Mr. McMahon:

In your effort to improve services and to reduce overhead costs, you have an ally -- Computer Communications Specialists, Inc.

CCS is the acknowledged leader in computer communications products and systems. We have been serving the Fortune 200 for the past seven years, and we are now offering three exciting new products to the public sector.

The Statesman, our touchtone audio-response system, turns each touchtone telephone into a computer terminal. This frees your CRT operators from time consuming database look-up tasks. A taxpayer can check the status of his Social Security or Income Tax refund check or a department manager can find out the status of a project. The caller simply dials the phone number of the database, enters his I.D. code, and responds to the friendly human voice of The Statesman by pushing the correct buttons on his phone.

The CCS Bar Code Scanner and an IBM PC, XT, AT, or compatible takes the typing out of data input. Simply by scanning, bar coded data on shipping and receiving labels can be instantly posted to inventory status reports. No more tedious data keying -- scanning is quick and accurate.

The ACCA Hand-Held Terminal System allows data input from remote field locations. Chores such as recording serial numbers for physical inventory can now be performed in hours rather than in days.

Stop by Booth #3708 at the Federal Computer Conference, September 9th - 11th, and let me show you how a CCS system can reduce cost and improve the flow of information in your department. If you are unable to attend FCC, or if you desire additional information, please return the enclosed card or give me a call at (404) 441-3114.

Sincerely,

J. Bruce Porter

J. Bruce Porter
Marketing Representative

JBP/khw

Enclosure